

Accreditation and State Licensure

In the United States, federal and state agencies and accreditors set and enforce standards of academic quality and consumer protection. Agencies in other countries impose their own accreditation and education licensure requirements on higher education institutions.

We advise colleges and universities concerning compliance with such requirements. We serve as education regulatory counsel in change of control and other transactions. We assist higher education institutions with requests for substantive changes, including new programs and additional locations.

And we represent higher education institutions before accreditors, including responding to complaints and compliance reviews; probation, show-cause, and termination proceedings; and developing teach-out plans and agreements.

Representative experience

Advising universities outside the U.S. seeking accreditation by U.S. accreditors.

Representing higher education institutions and other parties in accreditation and state education licensure aspects of change of control and other transactions.

Contacts

Stephanie J. Gold,
Washington, D.C.

---

Practices

Education

---

Industries

Education

Advising colleges and universities and dealing with state agencies concerning state authorization requirements for postsecondary education institutions, additional locations, educational programs, and distance education.

Representing a university in resolving a complaint and compliance review by a programmatic accreditor.

Latest thinking and events

Hogan Lovells Events

Webinar | New ED Rules on Financial Responsibility, Administrative Capability, and Certification Procedures

News

THIS WEEK: ED hosts listening sessions on bundled services exception to incentive compensation rule

News

FTC's proposed ban of employer non-competes: Are non-profits exempt?

News

Transformative times for India's education sector

News

Key questions answered - China's regulation of international data transfers effective 1 September 2022

News

Department of Education releases long-awaited Title IX proposal