

Government Investigations

Higher education institutions are subject to multiple laws, rules, and regulations covering every aspect of their mission. Oversight is becoming increasingly aggressive and the stakes are high.

We bring decades of experience in dealing with investigations, whether government-initiated, in response to whistleblower complaints, or because of internal compliance reports of fraudulent activities. Our combination of deep regulatory expertise and investigative experience is unparalleled. We strive to obtain the best outcome for you. Ideally, we aim to achieve a satisfactory resolution short of trial. When that is not feasible, we have tried — and won — hundreds of cases.

Representative experience

Represented one of the nation's leading research institutions in a False Claims Act investigation focusing on more than US$1bn of charges to federal grants.

Persuaded DOJ to decline intervention in a qui tam case filed against a public university. Subsequently, obtained dismissal of the relator's case.

Persuaded the Justice Department to decline intervention in a qui tam suit filed against a public university alleging effort reporting irregularities associated with NIH grants.

Contacts

Stephanie J. Gold,
Washington, D.C.

Practices

Transportation

Education

Industries

Education

Represented for-profit education company in state attorney general and Federal Trade Commission investigations relating to advertising and marketing practices.

Latest thinking and events

Media Mention

High-profile corruption grapples Southeast Asian businesses

GovMedia

Hogan Lovells Events

The role and importance of individuals in investigations

Published Works

In the crosshairs or at a crossroads? Indonesia's anti-corruption inflection point

Anti-Corruption Report

Published Works

You've got mail... So what? Messaging issues for business in Southeast Asia

Anti-Corruption Report

Published Works

Conducting life sciences investigations in Vietnam

Press releases

Former D.C. Attorney General Karl Racine joins Hogan Lovells' Washington, D.C. office