

Amy Cleaves

Associate

London

Biography

As part of the Infrastructure, Energy, Resources and Projects practice in London, Amy Cleaves has experience working on international energy projects and transactions, including power projects, oil and gas pipeline projects and project financing. With a focus on emerging markets, Amy works on projects that have tangible positive impacts on the local communities and governments. Her work includes advising on regulatory regimes, asset acquisition, new country entry across Eurasia and Africa, renewable energy financing, together with advising how the global energy transition will affect oil and gas companies.

As a founding member of the Business Integrity Group, Amy advises public and private sector clients on how to legally enshrine purpose and ensure their social mission drives sustainable, profitable growth. Amy helps her clients match their brand values and ethical standards with legal substance and navigate the ever-growing body of "integrity laws".

Amy is a member of the firm's 50:50 Diversity Committee and sits on the Social Enterprise Board.
