

Stacy Hadeka

Partner

Washington, D.C.

Biography

With a background in the aerospace and defense industry, Stacy Hadeka has a deep understanding of government contract issues impacting sector clients.

Stacy's practice encompasses all areas of government contracting, with a focus on matters of compliance, investigations and disclosure obligations, transactional due diligence, and bid protest litigation. She assists clients in manning complex government regulatory requirements in the areas of schedule contracting, cybersecurity, the supply chain, and domestic preferences. She also counsels clients on contract formation and administration.

Prior to joining Hogan Lovells, Stacy gained insight into the industry while working as in-house counsel for a major defense contractor and a commercial subsidiary with sales to the federal government. In her role, she supported the business by assisting with matters of compliance, ethics, and litigation. Stacy also clerked with the Civilian Board of Contract Appeals where she assisted with government contract claims and alternative dispute resolution.

Stacy received her J.D. from Boston College Law School and attended The George Washington University Law School for her LL.M. in Government Procurement. Through the LL.M. program, she deepened her knowledge and strengthened her skills associated with the practice of government contracts law.
