

Caitlyn (Kate) Mancuso

Associate
Philadelphia

Biography

Kate Mancuso understands that in business, reputation is everything. Kate knows how to work with clients to protect their integrity and their bottom line when high profile litigation threatens both.

Prior to joining Hogan Lovells, Kate was a Series 7 and Series 66 licensed financial advisor and a business owner, where she learned how to anticipate her clients' needs and create detailed solutions to complex problems. As a litigation associate in Philadelphia, Kate's practice focuses on complex commercial litigation and internal investigations, with particular focus on the healthcare industry. Kate has a keen sense for facts and details that makes her an asset on any team and enables her to craft compelling arguments in the face of challenging legal issues. But more importantly, Kate understands that pending litigation affects a company well before the final outcome of the matter, and she helps her clients communicate effectively with customers, employees, shareholders, and partners to minimize the business-side impact.

Kate has extensive experience in federal multidistrict litigation and coordinated state-level proceedings, and knows how to work effectively with joint defense counsel and plaintiffs' counsel to protect her client's long-term interests. She is equally comfortable leading a team or taking on a supporting role as needed, and she can be trusted to spot potential issues early on and identify smart solutions.

Kate's pro bono efforts include Social Security appeals
