

2006

The Legal Academy Goes to Practice

Hamdan v. Rumsfeld¹ is a rare Supreme Court rebuke to the President during armed conflict. The time is not yet right to tell all of the backstory of the case, but it is possible to offer some preliminary reflections on how the case was litigated, the decision, and its implications for the oft-noticed divide between legal theory and practice.

Contacts

Neal Katyal

Partner

> Read the full article online