

21 February 2017

Keeping It Real Estate

What does real estate investment have to do with the problem of tax evasion made possible by cash-in-hand payments in the building industry? Very little, one might suspect, but that has not prevented real estate investors becoming the unintended casualty of a withholding tax introduced in the 1970s to target tax fraud among builders. A concerted effort has now been made to lobby for sensible improvements, spearheaded by the Chartered Institute of Taxation.

Click here to read the full article.

Contacts

Christopher
Hyde

Counsel

> Read the full article online